NOTE:

1. As of November 2015 the FAA has begun removing marketing names from the Civil Model Designation column. When determining the appropriate type rating of an aircraft, compare the aircraft model from Block 2 of the Airworthiness Certificate to the Civil Model Designation column below. The column titled Current Type Rating Designation will show the appropriate type rating for this aircraft.

1. As of November 2015 the FAA has begun removing marketing names from the Civil Model Designation column. When determining the appropriate type rating of an aircraft, compare the aircraft model from Block 2 of the Airworthiness Certificate to the Civil Model Designation column below. The column titled Current Type Rating Designation will show the appropriate type rating for this aircraft.

NOTES:

* These are civil aircraft listed on a Type Certificate Data Sheet (TCDS) with the same model designation as the military aircraft. Care should be taken to differentiate between the civil model and military model.

 The TCDS or Flight Standardization Board (FSB) report should be referenced to determine which serial numbers of military aircraft are eligible to be converted to a civil model aircraft or issued this type rating based on 14 CFR § 61.73(e).
